DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 9/4/07 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 6, 11 and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent Application Publication No. 2002/0103463 to Luther et al.

In regards to claims 6, 11 and 17, Luther et al., disclose a system having an outer cannula (62) defining a length from a proximal end to a distal tip; a handle portion (60) coupled to the end of the outer cannula; the outer cannula is adapted to removably accommodate a biopsy aspiration device therein[0036]. The aspiration device includes an elongated cannula body (32) having a proximal end, a distal tip and a linear longitudinal axis, wherein a length of the elongated cannula body is greater than the length of the outer cannula (Figure 7); a lumen running longitudinally through the interior of the cannula body [0024]. The aspiration device includes a distal tip (18) and a laterally oriented distal opening adjacent to the tip, the distal tip includes an arcuate curved surface originating on the opposite side to the laterally oriented distal opening and terminating at the distal-most point of the distal opening (Figure 1). Luther et al. disclose a stylet (30) for removable insertion within the outer cannula.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 7 - 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent Application Publication No. 2002/0103463 to Luther et al. in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,919,172 to Golba, Jr..

In regard to claims 7 – 10, Luther et al. disclose the cannula body of the biopsy aspiration device being capable of injecting fluids [0024], but fail to disclose the proximal end of the cannula body having luer attachment. Golba, Jr. discloses the proximal end of the cannula body including a luer attachment (20) for removable coupling of an aspiration source (Col. 3, lines 55 – 56). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the proximal end of the cannula body as disclosed by Luther et al. to include a luer attachment as taught by Golba, Jr. in order to allow the cannula to be quickly connected to a desired fluid source. Luther et al. fails to disclose the proximal end of the biopsy aspiration device including a marking indicating the position of the laterally oriented distal opening. Golba, Jr. teaches the proximal end of the device including viewable indicia (21, 39) indicating the position of the laterally oriented distal opening. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the proximal end of the cannula as disclosed by Luther et al. to include viewable indicia as taught by Golba, Jr. to allow the user to know the location of the opening while inserting the device into a patient.

Allowable Subject Matter

6. Claims 12 – 14 are allowed. Claims 15 and 16 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
